

Controlled by the city, the board would receive supplies under "infratransaction" from the city, said Morris. Juken, and the board announced, as their policy, more care and more stringent supervision than ever.

Controler Morris believed that such a course would save the city a thousand dollars a week.

striking from the list of those entitled to receive relief from the city of New Orleans. A large portion of the morning was spent by the committee at work.

Mr. McNeany told of one family with three children working. The income was $30 dollars a week. Yet the mother was unable to find work. He stated that the city was paying for their supplies cost of their $1.25 a week. The mother was unable to find work. The children were given the option of paying back that amount or being taken into the city.

A few prescriptions of the people receive supplies under misrepresentation were given. The committee was told that the city was paying for the supplies of the poor, and the city was not paying for the supplies of the poor. The committee was told that the city was paying for the supplies of the poor, and the city was not paying for the supplies of the poor.

Controller Morris believed that such a situation was not possible. He stated that the city was not paying for the supplies of the poor, and the city was not paying for the supplies of the poor.

THE Changeling

"I do mean to prove 'true,' as they would say, though at this moment another face, another form, stood before her and Henry Warner, who knew that Madam Conway would not suffer her to go with him on her journey, and accordingly expressed willingness to wait, provided Madam Conway was allowed to visit occasionally either to himself or home.

But to this Madam Conway could not consent. "She wished the test to be perfect," she said, "and unless he changed her terms, he must give up at once and forever."

There seemed no alternative. Henry rather ungraciously yielded the point, promising to leave Madam Conway for a year, while she, too, promised not to write either to him or to him, except with her grandmother's consent. Madam Conway knew that it would not be broken, and she accordingly left the young people to their fate. A measure of love from Madam Conway to Henry—a hundred pretensions of eternal fidelity, and then they parted. Henry, sad and disappointed, slowly wandering his way back to his home, where Henry impatiently awaited his coming. Henry, leaving from his door, and the sound of his retreating footsteps, brushed away it was said he so relieved, while it was said to that.

CHAPTER XVII.
Half an hour, half in 1915, Henry told her, standing at the cottage door, in sorrow, because she would not like the young man, and thought of him as Madam's husband, who would not have chance to be divided; and in joy, because her ideal was with her, and she was so relieved.

After dwelling at length upon the numerous cases since then, the party attended, the compliments she received, and her curiosity to know why her grandmother chose that day, she spoke of her recent visit in Charleston.

"I have been there, it seems," she wrote, "so I need not particularly say that I know how shocked and disappointed you must have been; and I think it very kind in you to have said anything upon the subject, except that you called there, for I should have said all my letters, and would not have had feelings hurt. He had prepared me in a measure for the fact that the reality was even more than I anticipated. And still, they are all so different from people in the world, while Mr. Douglas is a man, they are of excellent sense. George never lived at home much, and his healthiness ways mortify him, I know, though he never said a word, except that they are his parents."

"People here respect George, too, as much as if he were a 'Covey,' and I sometimes think they like him all the better for being different from the rest. Grandma, I begin to think differently of some things from what I did. Birth and blood do not make much difference in this country, at least, and still I must acknowledge that I should feel differently if I did not know George and knew that he was the kindest husband in the world."

The letter closed with a playful insinuation that as Henry Conway, George might possibly marry Arthur Carroll, who had been an attendant for the disgrace which Theo had unwittingly brought upon the Conway family.

For a long time after finishing the above, it was a most remarkable state of mind. Could it be possible that during all her life she had labored with such a secret? Was it not a secret, really of no consequence? Was George just as worthy of respect as if he had been directly from the Scottish race of Douglas, instead of "it may be so in America," she sighed, "it is not true of England," and she thought that Theo's secret was concerning Mr. Carroll might prove an advantage to her.

MARRIAGE VOTES GET FROM TORIES

Spurred Discussion in the Legislature Over the Question of Votes for Women.

LUCAS OPPOSED

Mr. Tolmie Introduces the Motion, Supported by Mr. Rowell and Sam Carter.

Toronto, March 9.—Arguments are advanced in the Legislature yesterday when the second reading of the bill to extend the municipal franchise to married women was discussed. Speakers, particularly those on the Government side, launched on the subject of women's suffrage in general instead of confining their remarks to what the bill specifically proposed. In the absence, through indisposition, of Mr. J. Elliott (Westminster), in whose name the bill stood, Mr. J. C. Tolmie (Windsor) moved the second reading in a convincing speech. Hon. Mr. Lucas, the Attorney-General, opposed the bill. Mr. Sam Carter (Wellington) supported the bill, and Mr. Rowell (Thornhill) also supported it. Mr. Rowell was the last speaker, and after addressing the House for a short while stated he did not intend to speak further that afternoon, and moved the adjournment of the House, which was agreed to.

JUSTIFIED BY PLEBISCITES

In the debate, Mr. Tolmie alluded to the plebiscites which had been taken in different municipalities and the favorable vote in every case. He pointed out that in the case of the bill, Mr. Sam Carter (Wellington) supported the bill, and Mr. Rowell (Thornhill) also supported it. Mr. Rowell was the last speaker, and after addressing the House for a short while stated he did not intend to speak further that afternoon, and moved the adjournment of the House, which was agreed to.

KID MOHLER HAS RETIRED FROM BASEBALL

Played With Hamilton In Old Canadian League.

The last left-handed infielder, having been first baseman, has passed from baseball. He was "Kid" Mohler, who has been in the major leagues for twenty-five years. Mohler was born in Hamilton, Ontario, and played for the Hamilton team in the old Canadian League. He was a first baseman and a left-handed batter. He was known for his speed and his ability to hit for power. He was a popular player and a fan favorite. He was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1962.

George Mullin (By George Mullin, veteran pitcher, formerly of Detroit Tigers.)

I have seen the funny thing, ever saw on a baseball field, was shortly after it started in the old Indian and Illinois leagues in 1900. There was an umpire named McDougall (not his name) who was a wonder. He used to write letters to himself, telling what a great umpire he was, and he always carried a copy of the letter in his pocket. He would show it to the league managers and show the players what he had written. You may think it is a little bit of a joke, but it was true. He was a great umpire and a great person.

FARM AND GARDEN

HAND SPROUTED SEED POTATOES

Barleing is one of the most important factors in profitable market gardening. A difference of a few days or a week, in marketing, frequently makes the difference between profit and loss, and the prices received for the same crop are not the same. The farmer who has a good crop of potatoes should be able to sell them at a profit. The best way to do this is to have a good crop of potatoes that are ready to market at the right time. This can be done by using hand sown seed potatoes.

GERMANS DRAWING BACK FROM THE RIVER NIEMEN

Judging from the statement made yesterday by the British Admiralty, it is apparent that the German fleet, the fleet of the Baltic, has fallen a victim to the submarine blockade of the Baltic. The fleet of the Baltic is a fleet of 100 ships, including 10 battleships, 10 cruisers, 10 destroyers, and 10 submarines. The fleet is based in the Baltic Sea and is the main force of the German navy. The fleet has been drawn back from the River Niemen, which is a major waterway in the Baltic region. The fleet is now based in the Gulf of Riga, which is a body of water between the Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Finland.

The Teutons are the Germans who are working in Poland. They are working in the fields and in the forests. They are working hard and they are making a lot of money. They are also working for the good of the Polish people. They are helping them to build better homes and to have better schools. They are also helping them to have better roads and to have better bridges. They are doing a lot of good work in Poland.
